

Best Practices For Academics Traveling Overseas

American academic freedom and the advanced research conducted at academic institutions are frequently resented or resented. There are still some countries that openly want to steal R&D from American or other researchers, or used by hostile foreign governments / their military agencies.

- ✓ Prior to your travel, be sure to visit www.state.gov/traveladvisories and www.cia.gov/cia/publications/travelbook/travelbook.html for current travel advisories and the current political situation of the countries being visited.
- ✓ Do not travel with any unnecessary information or current research on a laptop. Avoid placing internet addresses, names, or anything you take note of which you will present or discuss at the conference. Do not leave your laptop unattended. Make sure your laptop is password protected and has a screen lock function that turns it off automatically after a certain amount of time. Have the system do this many times before and after travel. Recognize that your personal belongings may be searched several times.
- ✓ Understand that foreign universities, foreign companies, and foreign governments are often interconnected such that any inquiry or contact made during travel, whether may be from a hidden interest with a military motive.
- ✓ Not all conference attendees with whom you come in contact truly are genuinely interested in your research. Some may be inquiring on behalf of another country's researcher.
- ✓ Be aware of unsolicited requests sent to you on the internet, persons asking questions about your research, and persons requesting your opinion on the status of other's research being conducted at the Academic Institution. Information about failures in research is just as valuable as successes. Be careful in discussing any research that is not your own.
- ✓ Recognize not all foreign students who contact American professors do so in their own accord. Some are directed to do so by competitors to gain intelligence services.
- ✓ Obtain business cards of all personnel with whom you have extensive contact while traveling. Put the date of contact on the back and retain them for future reference.
- ✓ During your travels, it is common for researchers to research and development being conducted by others in your department or organization to those in institutions directly.
- ✓ Avoid political conversations, offering political opinions, while in foreign countries. This includes in person, on the telephone, or on the internet.
- ✓ Do not take any provocative or suggestive literature with you to other countries.
- ✓ After meeting with the appropriate representative in your academic institution, report any unusual personal, telephonic, or internet contacts to your local office of the FBI.